

NewFilmmakers Los Angeles Opens Applications for NewNarratives Program – Film News in Brief

By Jazz Tangcay, Selena Kuznikov, Jack Dunn

Home > Film > News

Aug 1, 2024 1:31pm PT

NewFilmmakers Los Angeles has opened applications for its NewNarratives program, which aims to recognize and support emerging global storytellers by providing them with financial backing and promotion.

Applications for the program opened to NFMLA members Aug. 1, with a submission deadline of Aug. 29.

In honor of “The Butterfly Effect” producer Anthony Rhulen, the program remains committed to awarding $20,000 in cash grant funding. The grants will be distributed in the form of four $5,000 prizes to support projects in various stages of production, including short films, feature films, episodic series, documentaries, experimental works and animation. The grants may be used to aid in the costs of audience strategy, concept, early development, pre-production, production and post-production.

Detailed program and submission information can be found on the organizations’ website.